Air taxi unveiled in Bavaria

1 A new kind of air taxi stands on a stage on the Town Hall Square of Ingolstadt, Bavaria, on Monday. The four-seater "CityAirbus" is scheduled to make its first test flights this year.

Nebraska running back surrenders on porn charges

2 Nebraska running back Maurice Washington surrendered to authorities in California Monday morning to face charges of child pornography and "revenge porn." Coach Scott Frost confirmed to reporters that Washington was not at practice on Monday and that he expected the running back to return to Lincoln later in the day. Washington was booked into jail in Santa Clara County with bail set at $35,000. He posted bail, and his next court date was set for April 10, according to the Omaha World-Herald. "Working through his lawyer, I know he wanted to get out there and surrender and satisfy the warrant as quickly as he could," Frost said. Washington has been charged with a felony count of child pornography for possession of a video of a person under 18 engaging in or simulating sexual conduct.

'Show time': Apple expected to announce TV service

3 Apple Inc. on Monday invited media to a March 25 event at the Steve Jobs Theater on its campus in Cupertino, California, where it is expected to launch a television and video service. Sources previously told Reuters that the company is targeting April for the launch of a streaming television service that will likely include subscription TV service. Apple often launches products and services in the weeks following an event. In its invitation, Apple did not specify the focus of the event and gave a single-line description: "It's show time." Apple has long hinted at a planned video service, spending $2 billion in Hollywood to produce its own content and signing major stars such as Oprah Winfrey. Sources familiar with the matter earlier told Reuters that the service may resell subscriptions from CBS Viacom and Lions Gate Entertainment Corp.'s Starz among others.

Trump budget boosts military and wall but targets social services

One senator called the plan "not worth the paper it is printed on."

President Donald Trump in his 2020 budget on Monday called for overhauling social programs that help poor and elderly Americans, while boosting military spending and funding a U.S.-Mexico border wall, in the opening gambits in his next funding fight with the U.S. Congress.

The Republican president's $4.7 trillion budget was immediately panned by Democrats in Congress, who rejected his push last year for wall funding in a standoff that led to a five-week partial shutdown of the federal government.

Like past presidential budget proposals, Trump's spending plan was highly unlikely to become law, especially with Democrats in control of the House of Representatives, but it does serve as an early manifesto of the policy priorities he will bring to his 2020 re-election campaign.

"President Trump has somehow managed to produce a budget request even more untethered from reality than his past two," said Democratic Rep. Nita Lowey, chairwoman of the House Appropriations Committee.

Democratic Sen. Patrick Leahy, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said in a statement that Trump's plan "is not worth the paper it is printed on."

This year, the stakes for a deal are higher than in past years. An Oct. 1 deadline to keep the government running coincides with a deadline to lift the debt limit. Without an increase in the limit, the U.S. government would risk a default, which could shock the world economy.

Trump's budget includes politically volatile proposals for overhauling Medicare, Medicaid and other costly social programs that form the American social safety net that helps the poor and underprivileged.

It asks for $8.6 billion to build a wall on the border with Mexico. That figure is more than six times what Congress gave Trump for border projects in each of the past two fiscal years, and 6 percent more than he has corralled by invoking emergency powers this year after he failed to get the money he wanted.

$750 BILLION FOR DEFENSE

Trump also called for defense spending to rise more than 4 percent to $750 billion, using the emergency Overseas Contingency Operations (OCO) account — derided by conservatives as a slush fund — to skirt spending caps set out in a 2011 fiscal restraint law.

Non-defense spending was held below those caps, thanks to steep proposed funding cuts to the State Department (23 percent) and Environmental Protection Agency (31 percent), among others.

Even with the cuts, which the White House said would add up to $2.7 trillion in savings over a decade, the budget office said the Trump plan would not balance until 2034, exceeding the traditional 10-year outlook.

Tax cuts have been a priority for the Republican White House and Congress in recent years, rather than deficit reduction. The deficit ran to $900 billion in 2019 and the national debt has ballooned to $22 trillion.

The Committee for a Responsible Budget said Trump's budget would add $10.5 trillion to the debt over a decade, and criticized the White House for what it called a "fantasy assumption" of 3 percent economic growth over that time frame — higher than the 2 percent average used by independent forecasters.

Unless the White House and Congress reach an agreement, the automatic spending caps from the 2011 law will kick in on Oct. 1, adding another level of urgency to the fall deadlines.

Pelosi says she is 'not for impeachment' of Trump

President Donald Trump should not be impeached unless the reasons are overwhelming and bipartisan, given how divisive it would be for the country, House Speaker Nancy Pelosi said in a Washington Post interview published on Monday.

"I'm not for impeachment," Pelosi, the top U.S. Democrat, said in the interview, which was conducted last week.

"Impeachment is so divisive to the country that unless there's something so compelling and overwhelming and bipartisan, I don't think we should go down that path, because it divides the country," she said. "He's just not worth it."

It was Pelosi's most direct comment yet on Trump's possible impeachment, a topic she has dealt with cautiously as it carries the potential to sharply split Democrats and the public ahead of next year's White House and congressional elections.

Special Counsel Robert Mueller is investigating Russian interference in the 2016 U.S. presidential campaign, possible collusion between Trump's campaign and the Russian government, and whether Trump has attempted to obstruct the probe. Trump has denied wrongdoing and called the investigation a "witch hunt."

Mueller is expected to send a report soon to Attorney General William Barr outlining his findings, and any evidence of wrongdoing could prompt Congress to take action against the president. Several panels in the Democrat-controlled House of Representatives are also investigating the president.

Although Pelosi said she believes it would be too divisive to impeach Trump, she characterized the president as unfit to hold office.

"No, I don't think he's fit to be president of the United States," Pelosi told the Post, adding he was "ethically unfit, intellectually unfit, curiosity-wise unfit."

Democrats face growing pressure from the left for impeachment, including a multimillion-dollar ad campaign from liberal billionaire Tom Steyer to build support for action against Trump.

The House Judiciary Committee, which would lead an impeachment inquiry, recently launched a broad probe of corruption, abuse of power and obstruction of justice allegations against Trump that could amount to impeachable offenses.

House Judiciary Committee Chairman Jerrold Nadler has said he believes Trump has committed obstruction of justice, but that it is too soon to decide on impeachment.

"We do not now have the evidence all sorted out," Nadler told ABC's "This Week" program on March 3. "Before you impeach somebody, you have to persuade the American public that it ought to happen," Nadler added. REUTERS

Democrats select Milwaukee for 2020 presidential convention

Wisconsin is known for beer, brats, cheese and now, the upcoming Democratic National Convention.

The Democratic Party on Monday picked Milwaukee, Wisconsin, to host the 2020 nominating convention to formally select its candidate for president, four years after Hillary Clinton narrowly lost the Midwestern state to Republican Donald Trump.

Clinton, who did not campaign in Wisconsin during the 2016 general election campaign, also lost the states of Michigan and Pennsylvania by narrow margins, helping give Trump the path to victory.

The Democratic National Convention will run July 13-16, the first time the party will hold it in a Midwestern city other than Chicago in over a century, the party said in a statement. The party had also considered Miami and Houston as host cities.

While presidential nominees from both maajor U.S. parties often had enough delegates well before their conventions in recent election cycles, the events play an important role by providing a televised national forum to showcase their message and highlight up-and-coming political personalities.

More than a dozen Democrats have announced that they are seeking the nomination in the state-by-state voting contests that kick off in Iowa in February 2020. The unusually crowded and diverse field includes five women serving in the U.S. Senate as well as the party's first openly gay candidate.

Bernie Sanders, a democratic socialist and U.S. senator who rose to national prominence when he ran in 2016, and Joe Biden, a former U.S. vice president who has not formally declared but is expected to run, have emerged as front-runners in recent opinion polls.

The Republican National Convention will be held in Charlotte, North Carolina, more than a month later, Aug. 24-27.

Democrats had won Wisconsin in presidential elections going back to the 1980s until Clinton narrowly lost the state.

Some Republicans ridiculed the choice: "Four years too late, Democrats go to Wisconsin," Kellyanne Conway, one of Trump's senior advisers, wrote on Twitter.

The party did well in Wisconsin in 2018 elections. Democrat Tony Evers was elected governor, replacing Republican Scott Walker.

"The Democratic Party is the party of working people, and Milwaukee is a city of working people," said Democratic National Committee Chair Tom Perez. "We saw in this last election what we can accomplish when we come together."

Milwaukee is known as a U.S. historical center of beer brewing and remains home to manufacturers including Harley-Davidson Inc., the iconic motorcycle brand.

Trump is seeking a second term in the election on Nov. 3, 2020.

Austria plans hikers code of conduct after tourist trampled by cows

Austrian Chancellor Sebastian Kurz said on Monday the country would introduce a legally binding "code of conduct" for hikers who visit its picturesque mountain pastures in response to the death of a German tourist who was trampled by cows.

The incident, which took place in Tyrol in 2014, has made national headlines and a court last month ordered the farmer who owned the cattle to pay hundreds of thousands of euros in damages to the 45-year-old victim's family.

That has caused outrage among farmers and consternation among the public, partly because the victim was walking her dog on a leash attached to her waist. Cows can charge to protect their calves when they see dogs, and hikers are advised to release their dogs in such cases, which she did not do.

"We will lay out clearly in the code of conduct what is expected of people who use mountain pastures," Kurz told a news conference.

Kurz did not provide specifics but did suggest that dogs would be an important part of the new code, adding that problem cases have "almost exclusively" in-involved dogs.

The code is part of a package of measures being worked on, including changing the law covering such incidents.

"We expect that if people stick to this code of conduct, there will be no incidents. If someone does not stick to the code of conduct, then they will lose the chance to claim damages," Kurz said.

Philly's ban on 'cashless' stores could backfire, experts say

Research suggests that requiring stores to accept cash is just papering over some big problems.

letters@metro.us

Last week, Philadelphia's mayor signed a bill requiring stores to accept cash, banning so-called "cashless" stores that only accept cards or apps. But the well-intentioned move — the first in the nation — is short-sighted, experts warn.

The argument against cashless stores seems pretty clear-cut: Requiring customers to use apps or payment cards instead of cash disadvantages the poor, the elderly and minorities, who disproportionately lack access to banks or credit.

But a ban on cashless stores comes with costs of its own — and it doesn't solve the structural changes that are making merchants want to skip cash, or the issues that prevent some groups from joining the cashless economy, Quartz reported on Saturday.

Cash is still popular in the U.S.: 36 percent of payments are made with bills and coins. But in countries like Sweden and China, its use is spiraling, replaced by cards and smartphone-based gizmos. A U.K. study called the Access to Cash Review looked at why. It found that the No. 1 reason merchants went cashless was the rising costs of accepting and banking cash, like bank fees, ATMs and security. "A law requiring stores to continue using cash won't alleviate those problems," wrote Quartz's John Detrixhe.

"It makes sense for cities like Philadelphia to plan ahead, even though cash is far from threatened in the U.S."

John Detrixhe

Cash also causes businesses to lose money via mistakes and misbehavior: "Cash transactions are a big source of loss when not monitored regularly against petty cash reconciliations," said accounting firm Cornwell Jackson. "Cash is the most coveted form of theft." Some argue that carrying cash is a threat to worker safety. In June 2018, Danny Meyer, chairman of the NYC-based Union Square Hospitality Group, said he would be opening more cashless restaurants for that reason.

The National Retail Federation opposes Philly's ban on cashless stores; they say merchants should decide which payment methods to accept. Before the law's passage, Amazon expressed concern that the law would impede the expansion of its cashless, checkout-free Amazon Go stores in the city. (The bill ultimately exempted businesses that operate on a membership model, like Amazon's Prime.)

At the same time, about 8 million Americans don't have bank accounts. "On its own, just protecting cash won't solve that problem," noted Detrixhe, suggesting that only a multi-pronged approach is progress: Help people who are underserved by banks to gain access to cards, and make the cash-banking system less expensive for merchants. "It's far easier to protect cash infrastructure — from ATMs to cash-sorting and armored car services — than it is to revive it once it's gone," he wrote. "It makes sense for cities like Philadelphia to plan ahead, even though cash is far from threatened in the U.S."

Last month, Sylvie Gallier Howard, an official in the Philadelphia Commerce Department, suggested that more needed to be done. She told City Council members she hoped the ban on cashless stores will be temporary. "Modernization is going to happen with or without Philadelphia, and we want to be part of it," she said.

Insurers face large claims after second Boeing 737 MAX crash

GETTY IMAGES

Boeing Co.'s insurers face big claims from families of the victims of the Ethiopian Airlines crash, coming fewer than six months after the crash of the same type of Boeing aircraft in Indonesia, insurance and aviation sources said.

An Ethiopian Airlines passenger jet bound for Nairobi crashed minutes after takeoff on Sunday, killing all 157 people on board, raising questions about the safety of the Boeing 737 MAX 8, a new model that also crashed in Indonesia in October.

While the initial insurance payments will be made by Ethiopian Airlines' insurers, they may look to recoup their money from Boeing's insurers if they can prove that the aircraft was faulty, the sources said.

Initial payments to the passengers' families are bound by the Warsaw and Montreal conventions, but those payouts could be much higher if families pursue legal claims, particularly through U.S. courts, said Clive Garner, head of law firm Irwin Mitchell's travel litigation group in London.

"If there were to be anything defective in terms of the plane or any of its components, then it would be possible to bring a claim against the manufacturer as well as the airline," he added.

Insurers typically form a consortium to share the risks of large claims, with the lead insurer taking a larger proportion of the risk. The insured value of the plane itself was likely around $50 million, according to sources.

Willis Towers Watson was the insurance broker for Ethiopian Airlines, while Chubb was the lead insurer, a Willis spokeswoman said on Monday. A Chubb spokesman declined to comment.

Britain's Global Aerospace was the lead insurer for Boeing and also for Lion Air, which operated the plane that crashed in October, said Global Aerospace Chief Executive Nick Brown.

Boeing shares fell 5.6 percent on Monday.

Boeing self-insures an initial layer of coverage before the Global Aerospace coverage kicks in, said Justin Green, a New York-based aviation lawyer who has represented families in cases against Boeing. Boeing declined comment on its insurance cover.

It is not uncommon for the planemaker, which is headquartered in Chicago, to face lawsuits in the United States, where legal compensation payments for the crash victims could run around $2 million to $3 million per person, depending on the law applied, compared to about $200,000 in Ethiopia, said Green.

U.S. courts often throw out such lawsuits, given the difficulty of finding witnesses overseas, but the fact that eight U.S. citizens were killed in the Ethiopian Airlines crash increases the likelihood that litigation on behalf of all victims' families could be heard by a U.S. court, Green said.

Initial compensation costs for all 157 passengers who died on the flight could be around $25 million, according to Reuters calculations based on the terms of the Montreal Convention.

Farewell Foles, as the Eagles hero, Jaguars agree on four-year, $88M deal

The Super Bowl LII MVP will replace Blake Bortles in Jacksonville.

The Jacksonville Jaguars agreed to terms with free-agent quarterback Nick Foles on a four-year, $88 million contract, NFL Network reported Monday.

NFL Network reported that incentives could push the maximum value of the deal to $102 million, and that incumbent Blake Bortles will be released in a few days. ESPN reported $50.125 million of Foles' contract is guaranteed.

Over the last few weeks, all signs pointed to the Jaguars signing Foles, who was allowed to enter free agency by the Philadelphia Eagles after guiding the team to the playoffs in back-to-back seasons. Foles took over for Carson Wentz down the stretch again in 2018, when a back injury ended Wentz's season and pushed Philadelphia into a divisional playoff matchup at New Orleans.

Eagles general manager Howie Roseman announced at the NFL Scouting Combine that Foles "deserves to lead a team."

"We had conversations at the end of the season, and he knew where I stood and how I felt about him," Eagles head coach Doug Pederson said. "Obviously, he's a big part of our success the past two years. It's an opportunity now for him to become a starter, and I'm excited for him to do that."

Wentz was out during the Super Bowl run recovering from reconstructive knee surgery and last season missed the final month of the regular season, and two playoff games, with a fracture in his back. Wentz is expected to make a full recovery and return as the starter in 2019.

Financially, it would have been a major challenge for Roseman had the Eagles opted to franchise and trade Foles. Because of the value of the one-year tender, the Eagles first must have displayed to the league the salary-cap space to use the tag. In Foles' case, more than $21 million was required to be shed in the form of restructured contracts or releasing players with hefty cap hits.

The Jaguars gave Bortles, a first-round pick in 2014 who hasn't developed into a consistent starter, a three-year, $54 million contract last year, but he went 3-9 as a starter and was benched for Cody Kessler.

His release will save Jacksonville just $4.5 million against the cap, while leaving $16.5 million in dead money, unless Bortles is designated as a June 1 release. That would create an additional $5 million savings in 2019 by sending $5 million in dead money to 2020.

Foles, 30, has 68 touchdowns and 33 interceptions in 54 career games. REUTERS

WHAT HAS HAPPENED TO OUR CULTURE?

There seems so very little that is reflected in our collective consciousness that is not involved with advertising. Every street, every subway car and walkway, every 10-pound magazine, every overstuffed newspaper — nearly everywhere your blurred gaze falls, someone is trying to sell, influence, manipulate, distract and brainwash you. Where will it end?

"So what's your kid's name?"

"Old Navy. Yep, he'll receive full tuition to Yale for re-branding him."

"What's on your little girl's forehead?"

"A Lyft tattoo. She gets health and dental insurance for life."

KOP Restaurant Week runs until
March 17. JONATHAN MOORE/MISTRAL

King of Prussia Restaurant Week is in full swing.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

King of Prussia may be well known for its massive mall and shopping endeavors, but what many people forget are all of the delectable and delicious eateries that also call KOP home. King of Prussia's Restaurant Week (March 11-17) is in full swing, and many top spots are offering incredible prix-fixe lunch and dinner menus ranging from $10-$40. The best part? Proceeds from this delicious week will benefit CHOP.

J. Alexander's

J. Alexander's is a perfect spot for KOP Restaurant Week. The eatery is wildly popular for its incredible food, fun atmosphere and great location right by the mall. Philadelphians can flock to J. Alexander's this week to indulge in calamari, spinach con queso, slow roasted prime rib, Carolina crab cakes, grilled salmon, filet mignon with bearnaise, carrot cake, key lime pie and much more. 256 Mall Blvd., King of Prussia, jalexanders.com

Legal Sea Foods

Legal Sea Foods offers a laid-back atmosphere where you can relax, indulge in a refreshing drink and eat a meal that will leave you wanting more. Restaurant Week menu items include bang bang cauliflower, nutty salmon, crispy fried shrimp, steamed 1-pound lobster, New England clam chowder, cheese-cake, their own take on bonbons and much more. 680 W. Dekalb Pike, King of Prussia, legalseafoods.com

Mistral

Anyone who dines at Mis-

tral knows how unique, stylish and delicious this award-winning hot spot is. The menu is tapas-style and filled with artistic small plates complemented by fresh, local ingredients and world-class chefs. Their KOP Restaurant Week menu includes salmon poke, pan-seared salmon, fusilli, short rib, dark chocolate panna cotta, homemade ice cream and more. 160 N. Gulph Rd., King of Prussia, mistralkop.com

North Italia

If you are craving Italian, North Italia offers the perfect selection of enticing dishes that will tickle anyone's fancy — especially with their decadent King of Prussia Restaurant Week menu. Dishes include sausage and kale soup, prosciutto bruschetta, chicken parmesan, arancini, bolognese, roasted mushroom tortellini, salted caramel bundino, tiramisu and much more. 350 Mall Blvd. #1000c, King of Prussia, northitaliarestaurant.com

The Melting Pot

The Melting Pot already offers a one-of-a-kind experience with their indulgent fondue repertoire. But for King of Prussia Restaurant Week, they are taking their dining experience up a notch. Menu items this week include buffalo chicken cheddar cheese fondue, avocado cobb wedge salad, death by chocolate fondue, cookies 'n cream marshmallow dream fondue, plus entree options including sesame wasabi ahi tuna, adobo shrimp, jalapeno filet mignon, sun-dried tomato mascarpone ravioli, Pacific white shrimp and much more. 150 Allendale Rd. #2100, King of Prussia, meltingpot.com

Guerra is hosting the new series "Runway Remake." RUNWAY REMAKE

A runway for everyone

"Runway Remake" will be a companion series to Bravo's "Project Runway."

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

Whether you watch the show or not, many people have heard of the fashion-forward competition series "Project Runway." The show premiered in 2005 and since then has amassed a fiercely loyal fan base. Now, the wildly popular show has a companion series that will take fans out of their viewing seats and into their own creative world where they can truly be a part of the action in their own way.

"Runway Remake" will premiere with "Project Runway" (now back to its original home channel, Bravo) on March 14 through NBC Universal's state-of-the-art digital lifestyle learning platform and streaming service Blueprint. There will be nine episodes of the brand-new digital series and the Denver-based streaming company got a familiar face to host the series: "Project Runway All-Stars" winner Mondo Guerra.

Guerra was thrilled to get the call about the new series. The 40-year-old was a fan favorite on "Project" and was the first and most obvious choice to host this new companion series. "This is crazy because it happened very, very quickly. I knew 'Project Runway' was going to be coming back to Bravo, and I was very excited about it, but I hadn't heard anything about the new show yet," says Guerra. "I didn't get a lot of information but it sounded like a fun project."

Although Guerra wasn't sure what to expect from his new hosting gig, he had his priorities straight. "The first thing that I was worried about was my wardrobe. Being on camera, that was my first hurdle."

Guerra is known for his incredible style, and although his designs didn't win "Project Runway" the first time around on season 8, when he returned for the show's "All-Stars" edition he came out on top. Now he has a new role to take on for the first time: hosting. "Going into Blueprint Studios, I was very nervous. Hosting a show that is focused on creativity and also a companion series of 'Project Runway,' I knew I had a lot on my shoulders."

The new series will showcase different DIY projects that mimic the challenges on "Project Runway." It gives viewers the chance to use their own inspirations from the show and make them into something completely personal and unique. "When viewers watch 'Project Runway' on Bravo and get inspired by the challenge, they can go to Blueprint and watch the companion series and they can participate by doing the challenge themselves."

Blueprint is also debuting a DIY box on March 14. Fans can purchase the box and take their creativity a step further. "The wonderful thing about creativity is that it's great with a challenge. I love a challenge. The biggest relation with DIY versus 'Project Runway' is the challenge. If you get this box and you make and sew your own garments — there's no time limit," says Guerra. "On Project Runway you have 10 hours to create a whole garment and present it to the judges. With the box, you can make this garment on your own time as you want to and as you like. And the best part is, no one is judging you."

The series will be available on Blueprint's website and also through an all-new mobile app. The challenges and DIY magic each week will surely inspire many to get up and get creating. "I think that no matter what you do — whether you're a sewist or a crafter or a cake maker — it's all relative. It's fun to see how people share and celebrate creativity," says Guerra. "All the episodes of 'Runway Remake' re-interpret the 'Project Runway' design challenges into their own craft and tutorials, eventually presenting DIY projects. It's very exciting. I can't really tell you the challenges because, well, what do they call it? Spoilers?"

"Runway Remake" will premiere on Blueprint alongside "Project Runway" on Bravo on March 14.

Eagles to sign DL Malik Jackson, re-acquire D-Jax from Bucs

The Eagles are quickly addressing holes within their roster.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

With the NFL's legal tampering period officially open, the Eagles are quickly beginning to address their deficiencies along the defensive line and at wide receiver. Monday morning saw the team prepare to sign Malik Jackson later this week before acquiring a familiar face in DeSean Jackson.

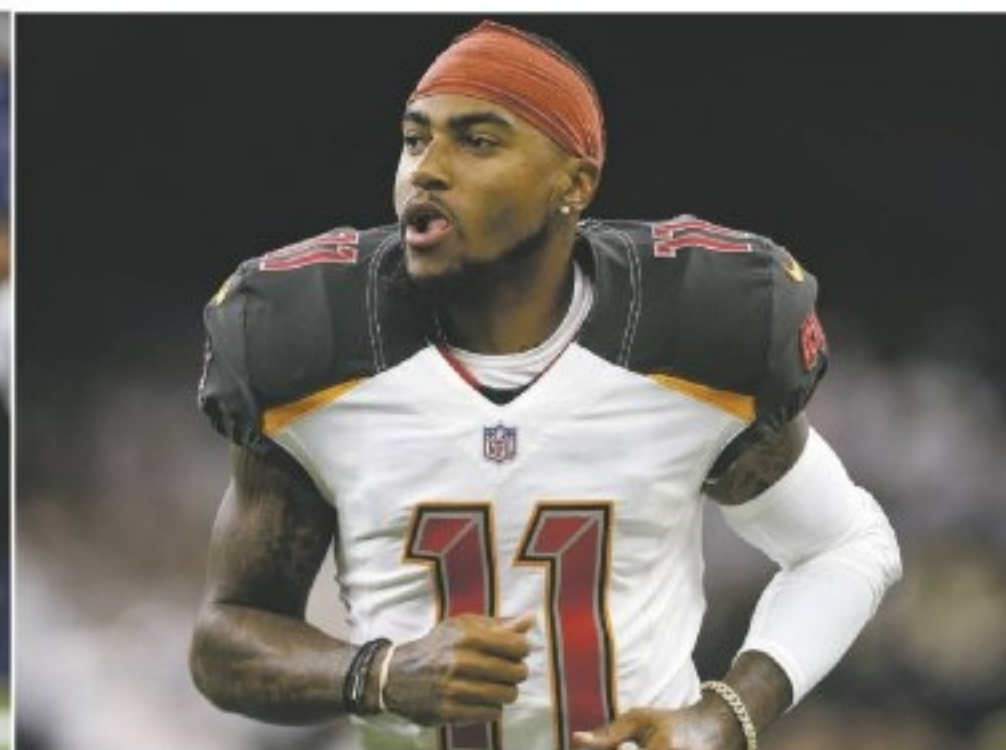

NFL.com's Ian Rapoport first reported Philadelphia is expected to sign the veteran lineman Jackson to a three-year, $30 million deal. The deal has not been agreed to as of yet and will not be made official until unrestricted free agents can begin joining new teams on Wednesday.

Jackson was released by the Jacksonville Jaguars last week after three seasons with the team. He made it halfway through his monster six-year, $85.5 million deal signed in 2016. However, there was no more guaranteed money in his deal and he'll count just $4 million against the cap. The Jaguars wound up saving $11 million on the deal as they prepare to sign free-agent quarterback Nick Foles this week.

The 29-year-old was one of the top defensive

The Eagles are bolstering their defensive line with the signing of Malik Jackson while setting up a possible return for former receiver DeSean Jackson. GETTY IMAGES tackles in the game over his first two seasons with the Jaguars, from 2016-2017. He racked up a combined 14.5 sacks with four forced fumbles while starting all 32 games. Last season saw him fall out of favor with the organization as he started just 10 games while playing in just 61.4 percent of the team's defensive snaps. It yielded just 3.5 sacks on the year, his lowest output since 2014, when he was a member of the Denver Broncos.

Still, he managed to accrue 51 quarterback pressures in 2018, which ranked within the top 10 among defensive tackles in the NFL, per Pro Football Focus.

Now the Eagles are getting a promising presence on a much more friendly deal. While billed as an interior presence, Jackson's versatility offers the opportunity for the Eagles to play him on the edge in certain packages.

It is much-needed insurance considering Philadelphia's defensive line is about to be gutted. After trading Michael Bennett to the New England Patriots, the Eagles are expected to lose Haloti Ngata to free agency while declining the $13 million option on Timmy Jernigan.

All three played sizable roles in an Eagles unit that ranked 10th in the NFL with 44 sacks while the rushing defense allowed the seventh-fewest rushing yards with 1,551.

Later on Monday, the Eagles officially brought back DeSean Jackson, trading a 2019 sixth-round draft pick and a 2020 seventh-rounder to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, per reports.

According to WIP's Howard Eskin, Jackson was telling his inner circle that he was nearing the completion of a three-year deal with the Eagles prior to the deal. He currently has one year and $10 million on his current contract, though there is a potential out this offseason.

The receiver spent his first six NFL seasons with the Eagles, amassing 6,117 and 32 touchdowns during that span before spending time with the Washington Redskins and, most recently, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Villanova the co-favorite to win Big East tourney

Exploring value in betting on the Big East Tournament.

MATT BURKE

Matt Burke is a veteran sports journalist and the Founder and Editor in Chief of MetroBet.

A strong showing in the Big East Tournament has often equaled NCAA tourney success.

Villanova not only won the Big Dance last season but also cut down the nets at Madison Square Garden a few weeks earlier, beating Providence in the Big East Tournament title game. When the Wildcats won it all in 2016, they made it to the tourney championship game but ended up falling to Seton Hall. Going back a few years, a Big East Tournament title propelled both the 2013 Louisville Cardinals and the 2011 UConn Huskies to NCAA championships.

It remains to be seen if Villanova is up to the task of winning two tournaments in the span of a month this year.

While the Wildcats are the co-favorites to win this week's tourney along with Marquette, it's important to remember that Villanova hasn't won a non-home game since late January (an 86-74 win at DePaul). There are plenty of Villanova alums in Manhattan, of course, but it's still a concern. We saw St. John's take advantage of that Garden crowd last month when they dumped 'Nova, 71-65, behind 22 points from LJ Figueroa.

Here are the latest Big East Tournament odds:

TWEET OF THE DAY

Scott Van Pelt
@notthefakeSVP

By rule, 68 have to make the bracket. Right?

VILLANOVA	2/1
MARQUETTE	2/1
CREIGHTON	5/1
SETON HALL	8/1
XAVIER	12/1
ST JOHN'S	12/1
GEORGETOWN	15/1
BUTLER	18/1
PROVIDENCE	30/1
DEPAUL	60/1

The best value here is definitely the middle-tier teams. Co-favorite Marquette is reeling heading into the BE tourney having lost four straight. Creighton, Seton Hall, Xavier and Georgetown have all proven to be capable of beating top teams.

Sports betting 101: The magic of parlays

Six-team parlays on point spreads or Over/Unders pay anywhere from 40/1 to 45/1 depending on where you're betting them.

Betting moneylines in parlays can change the payouts dramatically in one direction or another. A six-team parlay using favorites at -200 on the moneyline (about a five-point favorite in point spread terms) would only return 10/1. A six-team parlay using +200 underdogs (around +6 in point spread terms) would return more than 700/1.

These dynamics are important to think about in early March because pundits and casual bettors start talking about futures prices to win the NCAA Tournament. Some high-profile teams look like they offer value at 15/1 or 20/1.

Picking a team to win the National Championship is basically asking them to win a six-team moneyline parlay for you. But you can simulate the power of a parlay by backing your selected team to win outright each round (which is what they HAVE to do to win the national title). After each game, fully reinvest your initial stake and profit. Keep rolling it over, game by game. If your choice DOES go 6-0, you'll be grateful you bet it this way rather than on the futures board. If it doesn't, you lose the same initial stake.

Exploring odds on 2019 NL Cy Young award winner

Aaron Nola has 9/1 odds to capture the award.

GLEN MACNOW

Glen Macnow is a renowned sports talk radio voice in Philadelphia on WIP. He is the host of the Eagles official pregame show.

For years, a buddy and I wagered an annual steak dinner on baseball's Cy Young Award. We each had a short list of studs — mostly favorites — and once you won with a guy, he was yours forever. So my pal collected three juicy porterhouses, thanks to Max Scherzer. And I'll always toast the late, great Roy Halladay for earning me those two ribeyes at Del Frisco's.

It's been fun. And highly caloric. But now the stakes get higher than, well, steaks.

With legalized sports gambling, we can now bet on any future we want at casinos around the area. If I win this time, I'll take my earnings without a side of mashed potatoes.

And because we get actual odds in this new world, I'm not just leaning on the favorites. Washington's Scherzer, for example, is a perennial candidate for Cy. But at 9/4 in 2019, the payout doesn't seem worth the investment. Who wants to bet the chalk anyway?

So let's look at other NL candidates. The Mets' Jacob deGrom had a spectacular 2018 season, certainly worthy of the 2018 Cy he won. DeGrom cut his ERA in more than half (3.53 to 1.70) and dropped his WHIP nearly 25 percent. Had he done that at age 25, rather than age 30, I'd believe he could repeat. But at his age? Sorry, Mets fans. I see it as an outlier season. Clayton Kershaw (10/1) has been a three-time winner (cost me a steak each time), but he enters 2019 with more shoulder issues. My next wager on him will involve the Hall of Fame.

And hey, Nats fans. I'm also staying away from Patrick Corbin (25/1) who's overpaid and overrated after one strong season; and from Stephen Strasburg (25/1), unless the wager is how many times he winds up on the newly named "injured list." And I'll avoid the excellent Kyle Freeland (18/1) because in their 26-year history, no Rockies pitcher has ever received a single first-place vote for Cy Young.

That still leaves worthy candidates. Aaron Nola (9/1) improves every season and is entering his prime at 26. He will benefit from stronger defense (Jean Segura, Andrew McCutchen) and a potent lineup, which should persuade manager Gabe Kapler to let Nola pitch deeper and earn more wins. A terrific bet at the odds.

And throw a few Benjis at these long shots:

@ Madison Bumgarner (18/1), whose recent injuries are more freak accidents than baseball breakdowns. I foresee a strong bounce-back season, even if the Giants stink.

@ Walker Buehler (25/1) is the next great L.A. pitcher. Did you know the Dodgers have won 12 Cy Young awards — five more than any other franchise?

@ Mike Foltyniewicz, Braves (50/1) and Robbie Ray, Diamondbacks (50/1). It's fun to bet a long shot, and both of these guys seemed poised for big-time success. Take five bucks you'd spend on coffee and lay it down on one of these 27-year-olds.

At those odds, I'll bet 'em both. And when I collect, I'll be buying steak dinners for all. Make mine medium-rare.

MLB Futures: Phillies over, Yankees under

With baseball's Opening Day drawing closer, MetroBet dives into the futures market, specifically win totals.

Phillies: 89.5 wins

Those considering the Phillies a World Series contender may want to tap on the brakes, but it looks like GM Matt Klentak did enough to make Philly the team to beat in the NL East.

The signing of superstar Bryce Harper might not have even been the Phillies' most important offseason move; they also won the J.T. Realmuto sweepstakes, shipping out a fleet of prospects for arguably the best catcher in the game. The addition of David Robertson to a mostly shaky bullpen from a year ago will help immensely. The veteran presence of Andrew McCutchen and Jean Segura will also help cut down on errors in the outfield and infield; Philly was among the most sloppy defensive teams in baseball in 2018.

Looking at the rotation, Aaron Nola was a Cy Young contender last year, Jake Arrieta is a reliable veteran, and youngsters Vince Velasquez, Nick Pivetta and Zach Eflin should improve with age. All systems are go for this group.

The verdict: Over.

Yankees: 96.5 wins

The Yankees' rotation looks better than it did a year ago, with James Paxton invading from Seattle and a full year from J.A. Happ forthcoming. But with Luis Severino's Opening Day status in doubt, bettors can see that New York's depth may be tested. The Yankees should get close to this number, but 96.5 wins just seems too ambitious with the defending champion Red Sox and pesky Rays in the AL East.

The verdict: Under.

SOME BIG NAMES THAT THE EAGLES SHOULD CONSIDER IN FREE AGENCY

THE SPORTS PROFESSOR

GLEN MACNOW

@RealGlenMacnow

NFL free agency officially begins Wednesday afternoon. Here's my advice to fans: Put on your Eagles green, flip on the NFL Network, order in a hoagie and get ready for the excitement.

Unlike baseball's endless "Game of Thrones" winter, the NFL hot stove heats up fast. Prominent names will move in the first few days. Franchises will make dramatic changes.

General manager Howie Roseman has been sharp at this game. He's had some free-agent whiffs, no doubt (Chance Warmack, Haloti Ngata, Mark Sanchez), but his successes include guard Brandon Brooks, safety Malcolm Jenkins, line-backer Nigel Bradham, wide receiver Alshon Jeffery, defensive end Chris

Mark Ingram, among others, should be targets of the Eagles this offseason. GETTY IMAGES

Long and, of course, quarterback Nick Foles, who now departs.

The Birds already got off to a good start Monday, signing defensive tackle Malik Jackson, who was released by Jacksonville. Jackson's been a Pro Bowler and won a Super Bowl with Denver. He'll look great lined up next to Fletcher Cox.

But Roseman's team has other needs, not all of which can be addressed in the April draft. And, after recent moves, he has $20 million in cap space. Here's where I think he should spend it:

RUNNING BACK

After Jay Ajayi's injury last season, the Eagles rotation was a mess. No one on the current roster seems capable of playing the lead in this production. Le'Veon Bell would be an amazing addition, but there's little shot the Eagles commit what it costs to sign him.

That means looking at the next level. Tevin

Coleman of the Falcons is a productive, versatile 25-year-old. He had 1,076 yards last season on runs and receptions. And he's averaged 4.4 yards per carry over his career. He'd be a great fit here — as well as for many other teams. He'll draw lots of interest.

Keep an eye, too, on the Saints' 29-year-old Mark Ingram, who can run with the ball (4.8 yards per carry over the past four seasons), as well as catch and pass block — always important with the Eagles. And I love Cleveland's Duke Johnson, who's not a free agent but rumored to be available. He's among the best pass-catching backs in the NFL.

WIDE RECEIVER

DeSean Jackson is officially back in Philadelphia after the Tampa Bay Buccaneers dealt him for draft picks on Monday. With one year and $10 million left on his contract, it's not a bad idea. Even at 32, Jackson averaged 18.9 yards per catch in 2018 — the third time in five seasons he's led the league in that category.

It seems the Eagles have been searching for a speed receiver since Jackson left in 2014. If they're looking for more, I'd like to see them target John Brown. Playing in the Ravens' pitiful passing game last season, Brown still averaged 17.0 yards per catch. And he fights for the ball.

DEFENSIVE LINE

The reshuffling is already underway with the signing of Malik Jackson and the trade of DE Michael Bennett to New England. Also, expect the departure of Tim Jernigan (whom I think they should keep on a short-term deal).

Two sexy names: Pass rusher Ezekiel Ansah of the Lions, who would be an upgrade from Bennett, and DT Ndamukong Suh, who had his typical up-and-down season while making $14 million for the Rams in 2018. One hook here: Suh spent his first four seasons in Detroit playing for current Eagles defensive coordinator Jim Schwartz.

Oh, and don't be surprised if DE Vinny Curry returns from Tampa under a short-term deal as Bennett's replacement.

This much is sure: The team that opens this September will be vastly different from the one whose season ended in New Orleans last January. And the remake starts this week.
